9. Brief background, History (antecedents), ~200 words

In 2011, the Office of the Vice President for Academic Affairs, under the auspices of Vice President Gisela Concepcion, constituted a packaging-cum-promotions committee to conceptualize, plan, execute, and monitor the promotional materials for the entire UP System. The initiative was aimed at helping UP “become the primary choice for tertiary education of high school students and their parents upon graduation; encourage alumni to donate; and inspire the private and public sector to collaborate with UP in terms of research and creative output.” A list of the “champions” in each constituent university (CU) was solicited, as well as information about all of its faculty members. The office also engaged the services of Mr. Efren Ricalde to photograph some activities and facilities in each CU. “Live! Lead! Give!” was adopted as the tagline for the promotional materials, among which was a video primarily targeted at enticing young people to join UP as students (<http://ovpaa.up.edu.ph/up-videos/>).

Special Projects of the Office of the Vice President for Academic Affairs
Packaging the University of the Philippines

Brief Description of the program/project

The purpose of “Packaging the University of the Philippines” is to develop the essential materials certain to generate interest in UP. The project aims to:

1. reinforce the strengths and highlight the achievements of UP as a national university (in coordination with the Public Affairs Office), enhance linkages and collaborations with other international academic institutions (in coordination with the Public Affairs Office), promote the talent pool of the university graduates to various local and international companies and organizations, create a centralized database for the university scientists and researchers and their field of specialization;
2. entice the best and brightest high school students into taking the UPCAT and enrolling in UP;
3. improve the GE courses, incorporate research and creative work into the GE program; highlight the relevance and practicality of UP training in advancing students’ careers;
4. attract more public and private funds to drum up inter-departmental and cross-disciplinary researches, highlight and market research outputs of the university (laboratory to market programs), and promote the various services of research units of the university to companies and individuals; and
5. create materials such as proposals for submission to large benefactors such as the “Giving Pledge” group (an elite group inviting the wealthiest individuals and families in America to commit to giving the majority of their wealth to philanthropic causes), and to find a way to entice big donors into supporting UP and its programs.

Justification

As the national university, UP needs to attract the brightest students in the country. Private schools are starting to gain the lead through media efforts, so UP must not rest on its laurels but endeavor instead to become more visible and accessible to the public. This entails becoming proactive in its student search. It is UP’s duty to look for the finest students in the land who will serve the country in the future.

“Packaging the University of the Philippines” will highlight the accomplishments of UP faculty, research and creative units, students, and alumni as well as the success of UP programs that are certain to encourage and entice potential students. Several colleges in UP Diliman have successfully gone on road shows to top high schools and presented their programs, which has resulted to increased enrolment. The project's advertising package will be presented to the different high schools in the country. Its output will enable other units to bring UP to various parts of the country using carefully conceptualized promotional material. An Academic Portal will also be created, where the UP alumni's accomplishments will be uploaded for faster dissemination. Media exposure and personal appearances will also constitute the packaging. This project will not only attract prospective UPCAT applicants, but will also bring UP-based accomplishments to the attention of the University's community. Ultimately, such widespread awareness will result in the influx of funding support from alumni and other external resources.

Work plan to include activities, deliverables, deadline for deliverables

The program requires the establishment/ development of the following:

1. academic portal
2. print materials
3. promotional activities e.g. media exposure, road shows, etc.

Budget (itemized by PS, Operating Expenses, Misc, etc.)
